

Session 1

Getting Ready for Your Mentorship

Your mentor and the GMI team are looking forward to your mentorship! We hope you take full advantage of this opportunity.

Your mentor will take you through the process of getting a great job and then how to distinguish yourself in your new job. We ask that you commit to the work required to benefit from this mentorship. Successful careers happen not because of talent. Those who succeed are usually the ones who put in the effort, set goals, and work to a plan.

Everything you need for your GMI mentorship can be found at:

<https://globalmentorship.org/courses/student-mentorship-program/>

Keep this link handy because you will use it for every session. We suggest that you create a shortcut on your desktop for this link. It is important to review these materials before the first meeting with your mentor.

Note, previously you were sent an email with a request to set your new password. If you didn't see this, please check your spam folder. You will need to create a password the first time you log in.

For your first meeting with your mentor, you should review the GMI Student Mentorship Guide found in Session 1 of the Student Resources Portal. For all other sessions, you will have training materials in the folder labeled for each session. Please review these materials before each session.

LinkedIn Requirements

You should have already completed the LinkedIn preparation training; "Getting Started with LinkedIn". This is a requirement before beginning your mentorship and if you have not set up your LinkedIn profile with the recommended content, you can learn how to do this now at: <https://gmi.link/LinkedIn-Training>.

This is required because you will begin adding to your LinkedIn profile in Session #4 to build a business network and attract job recruiters.

Be Engaged

Good mentors want to work with people who are energetic and committed. Emotionally draining behaviors, like complaining and pessimism will not endear you to your mentor. Mentees need to show that they are mature and genuinely open to learning, without making their mentors assume responsibility for the success of the mentorship.

Be an energy donor, not an energy recipient in your mentoring relationship and help to drive the sessions forward. Be proactive, and accept all comments as important learning opportunities, even if they appear harsh.

Your career is just beginning, and you are establishing a reputation, so it is important that you acquire the standing of someone who follows through on tasks in a timely fashion. If you agree to do something, understand that it is a firm commitment, and make sure you deliver on time and to a high standard.

Being an effective mentee is a learned skill that requires practice and patience. A successful mentee communicates clearly, is engaged, prepared, and finishes tasks ahead of schedule.

The “Students Community Forum” is a great place to network with fellow students and seek advice on your mentorships. We know that sometimes situations pop up in a mentorship that you wish you could ask another student for advice or assistance. Click this link to go to the Forums. You can also get to the Forums by clicking the “Forum” button at the top of on the Student Resources Portal. We suggest you take the time to introduce yourself and start building connections within GMI.

If your mentor hasn't already contacted you, you are encouraged to email them to begin the mentorship. This will show that you are ready and excited to begin the GMI Mentorship!
